

PAVING PROGRAM FOR SEASON IS INCREASED TO SIX STREETS BY PARK AVENUE PROPOSAL

Work Already Started On Depot Street Job— Lake St. Finished.

One street completed, two more nearly finished, work begun on a fourth, paving of a fifth assured, and a proposal to pave a sixth street acted upon favorably is the record of the village for paving thus far during the 1927 season. If present indications are true, the board of local improvements will have achieved a record for Antioch which can scarcely be matched in any of the surrounding communities.

The contract for the paving of Depot street was let by the village board of local improvements Tuesday to the firm of Darrow and Barron for the sum of $15,000. The contractors are on the ground, having recently completed the paving of Lake Street and being now busy finishing the paving of Hardin and Victoria streets. They began work on Depot street yesterday morning and will rush the work so that the street will be paved this season.

Park Avenue To Be Next

The village board also acted favorably on a petition signed by residents of Park Ave., (Johannott Street) calling for the paving of the street with a 25 foot paving. The president was instructed to have the estimate prepared ready to be considered at the meeting next Tuesday.

The project for the paving of Center street has been advanced this week by advertising for bids. It is not anticipated that any opposition will develop as the property owners concerned have been unanimous in their request that the street be paved.

The board heard the final report of the engineer on the Lake street paving and voted to accept the work and make payment therefor with the exception of the 10 per cent of the contract price which is withheld by law.

Drainage Conditions Here Receive Approval of Chief Inspector

Drainage conditions in Antioch and vicinity received the approval of Frank Smith, Chief Inspector of the Fox River Conservancy District who was here yesterday making a survey of the region.

Mr. Smith especially commended the cottage owners in the various subdivisions along the lakes, stating that they had made provisions for keeping their lake front clean and taking care of all sewage and debris with remarkable thoroughness and success, and that here, as in most other regions in the district, he found everyone anxious to cooperate in keeping the Fox River system clean and attractive.

The inspector reported that the sewage disposal plant owned and operated by the village of Antioch was adequate to care for a population of 2000 people and he saw no reason why it should not continue to function as long as it was properly perated. He called attention to the fact that the channel of the Sequoit creek should be cleaned of rubbish, overgrowth of weeds, debris, etc.

Mr. Smith stated that he found people everywhere interested in the question of drainage and river pollution and that wherever he went a willingness to cooperate with the conservancy board was shown. Many of the newer subdivisions around Antioch are so organized that adequate provisions for sewage are obligatory upon those buying lots.

Lineman at Cross Lake Electrocuted

Leo Hoidtford in the employ of the Wisconsin Gas and Electric Co. at Witnet was electrocuted and Chas. Olson, assistant line foreman for the company, was injured yesterday afternoon at Cross Lake when the former in some way came in contact with a high tension line. The two were working on the line back of the hotel at Cross Lake. The details of the accident are not known.

Local Fire Department Answers Call To Grass Lake Fire

The unusually dry weather of the past three weeks provided tinder which fanned the fury of grass fires in the dry grass and rushes at Grass Lake last week and this.

The smoke from the flames became so dense Saturday afternoon that inhabitants of the nearby summer cottages became alarmed and put in a call for the Antioch fire department. The firemen, upon their arrival, discovered that the fire was not dangerous as it was so located that it burned toward a neck of water and did not jeopardize any property or lives, and so returned without making an effort to extinguish it.

It is hoped that a drenching rain will soon put out the fire and thus do away with the nuisance and potential danger that it has become.

GRAND JURY NAMES SIX IN LAKE COUNTY FUND SHORTAGE

Bracher and Associates are Indicted—Bairstow Also Held

Four true bills were returned by the grand jury of Lake county yesterday indicating five in connection with the shortage of funds in the treasurer's office and one in connection with a shortage in the funds of Waukegan township. Bill number one indicted County Treasurer Roy Bracher on a charge of embezzlement. Number two named Roy Bracher, Ira Pearsall, Harold Martin, Caleb Busick, and Clark C. Nye on a charge of conspiring to embezzle $100,000 from the county treasury in 1922. The third named Bracher, Pearsall, and Martin for conspiracy in the alleged taking of $33,000 as interest on county deposits and the fourth named George Bairstow with withholding $60,000 in township funds.

The action of the grand jury had been expected from the first. After the returning of the indictments Col. Smith gave out the following statement:

"The indictments voted by the grand jury will be prosecuted without reference to payment. They will be prosecuted vigorously and with force, fairly, impartially and without malice. Cases will be set for trial on the second Monday (Oct. 10) of October," he wrote.

Bracher To Repay Money

Meanwhile Roy Bracher, County superintendent has handed in his resignation as treasurer to take effect when the board of county commissioners desire, and has raised through advances of his friends the sum of money to cover his shortage as treasurer. Friends of the treasurer take the stand that Bracher deposited the money in the bank at Eureka, Kansas, in good faith without any intention of defrauding the county and that he is only civilly liable for the amount of the deficit.

The case is set to be heard in the October term of court and it is probable that attorneys representing each of the defendants in the county shortage will file pleas of not guilty and ask for a separate trial, which would materially help the defense.

All of the men arraigned are released on bond with the exception of Nye who is not in Waukegan and for whom a writ has been ordered by the court.

Bracher's resignation will be accepted, according to statements of members of the board of supervisors, and it seems certain at present that J. B. Morse, deputy county clerk will be appointed to succeed Bracher until the election next spring.

The grand jury which returned the bills was composed of the following men:

County Board Employs Cops for Two Months

Arrangements have been made by the finance committee of the county board of supervisors for the employment of two motor cops in the employ of the Sheriff's office. The officers, George Heckinger and Wm. Kelly, will be retained for two months and the proposition of a regular police patrol for the county will not be taken up until the October session.

Efforts made at the last session to procure a police patrol for the county were not successful since the finance committee considered the cost of maintenance prohibitive. Later it was decided that the patrol would be the means of preventing loss of life and property from auto accidents, and the two motor cops were retained after serving over the 4th.

ANTIOCH'S WHITE WAY LIGHTING PROJECT IS AGAIN A LIVE ISSUE

Five Year Struggle for Improvement Is Revived

Antioch's five year struggle for an ornamental lighting system, commonly known as "the white way," for main street was revived recently when the board of local improvements, acting upon the advice of Attorney Runyard, appointed W. F. Ziegler to spread an assessment against the property along the business district to defray the cost of the installation. Mr. Ziegler is now busy on the project and the necessary legal steps are being taken to get the improvement under way by September.

It will be remembered that this project was killed for the time being last November when the village board refused to vote favorably on the question of calling for bids, four trustees voting against it and two for it.

At that time, $616 spread as a public benefit, proved to be the stumbling block in the procedure. This year no public benefit is to be assessed. The entire cost of installation is to be paid by special assessment against the property benefitted.

Channel Lake C. C. Gives Second Annual Field Day August 6

The Channel Lake Country Club is to be host to the public Saturday, August 6th, at the second annual field meet. The program is to start at 3:00 o'clock daylight saving time and includes a variety of sports and contests.

Two teams composed of club members will compete for a silver trophy in a five inning ball game. Races and contests are numerous and merchants of Antioch have donated prizes so that each event will afford rewards to three or four of the lucky ones. There are scheduled married men's races, married women's races, young women's race, young men's race, races for girls and boys under 15, a shoe and stocking race, necktie race, women's ball driving contest, a pie eating contest for cadettes and small boys, and many other activities.

Last year's crowd at the field day was so large and the entries so numerous that the races had to be run in relays and a still larger crowd is expected this year.

This is the second of the annual field days that the club has given to the public. Everything will be free and everyone is invited. There will be no golf playing as everyone will be urged to participate in the events.

Negro Buried Under Gravel Bank For 24 Hours Dies From Injuries

After twenty-four hours spent in a semiconscious condition when a gravel bank from which he was loading a truck just east of the village buried him almost to his neck, Louis Starr, colored, died at the County hospital yesterday morning as the result of injuries received.

Starr succeeding in calling to four Antioch boys, Norman Peterson, Joe Pachay, Louis Steininger and Clarence Van Patten, who immediately summoned Dr. Williams to his rescue.

The boys had a hut near the pit and were driving over to it in a Ford truck when they heard the man's feeble cry and discovered his plight. Starr had finally succeeded in digging himself out and crawling the three feet up the slight embankment

UNPAID INTEREST IS CAUSE OF SEWER FUND DEFICIT: SIMMS

Failure to Collect Interest Leaves $1,500.00 Debt. According to Auditor

Failure to collect the proper amount of interest on village sewer bonds that have been outstanding for the past ten years is cited as the cause of about $1,500 indebtedness, according to S. E. Simms, public accountant, who is now on the job of auditing the books of the village of Antioch for the first time in history.

The indebtedness, amounting to approximately $1,500, has been a source of worry to the present board members as well as to the preceding administration, who were unable to locate the cause of the deficit, until Mr. Simms unearthed the fact that the proper amount of interest had never been collected.

All sewer bonds become due this year. "This deficit could be paid from the general taxes, if we had the money, or the amount could be paid by issuing bonds, although bonds are not very popular here just at this time," Mayor S. E. Pollock said today in discussing the matter. How the money will be raised is a matter of conjecture.

McHenry Dam Raised To Determine Effect On The Fox River System

Plans for the utilizing of the $175,000 appropriation made by the last legislature for a dam in the Fox River system were brought to a halt last week when it was learned that an error in the wording of the bill made it designate a location at the Nippersink creek rather than the one below Mistake lake.

Temporary repairs were made in the dam at McHenry and it is planned to use the $10,000 appropriation made to repair the dam there this season. The McHenry dam was raised 32 inches last week in an experiment to determine what effect a dam at that spot would have on the levels of the lakes. Preliminary measurements made this week by the Fox River Conservancy board indicated that the water had already raised 12 inches at the Fox River bridge and 5 inches in Lake Marie.

Ten days more will be required before a full check can be made.

AUTO ACCIDENTS GET THREE LIVES OVER WEEK END

Three Dead, One Dying is Toll in Western Lake County

George Smith, 26, and Miss Esther Kalke, 21, both of Chicago, are dead, and Jack O. Shillock, also of Chicago, is probably fatally injured as the result of an auto accident in which the car they were driving, a Marmion Eight, crashed into a tree Sunday morning while going at a high rate of speed.

The accident occurred near Loon Lake about 4:00 a. m.

The trio, who had been visiting with friends in a summer cottage at one of the nearby lakes, were returning to Chicago. The car became unmanageable at the corner and all three were thrown out as the machine collided with a tree, and were hurled with such a terrific force that the impact of their bodies broke down two fence posts and a fence where they fell.

Aid Is Summoned

When Arthur Hutton and C. Meyers, both of Chicago, who were the first at the scene of the accident, drove up they found Smith already dead and the other two entangled in the barbed wire of the fence and terribly mangled. A messenger came into town and aroused Frank Valenta, traffic cop, and Adolph Pesat who was on duty at the Antioch Sales and Service garage. Pesat and Valenta succeeded in summoning the ambulance from Waukegan, the hearse, Dr. Heebe and a nurse, Mrs. Richard Allmer of Antioch.

Miss Kalke and Shillock were taken to Victory Memorial hospital where it was found that Miss Kalke had both legs and her back broken and was terribly mangled about the head and face.

Shillock suffered from internal injuries and is reported as hovering between life and death with a slender chance of recovery.

Inquest Is Delayed

A jury was sworn in to probe the death of the two, and the investigation was continued pending the death or recovery of Shillock.

That the car in which they were driving was going at a terrific rate of speed before they turned the corner was evident from the fact that the speedometer showed a reading of 63 miles per hour. It was reported that Miss Kalke who was a telephone operator was to have gone on duty in Chicago at 7:00 a. m.

The third fatality occurred when two cars, one driven by Kenneth Reed of Grayslake, and a second by Theo. Shelton of McHenry, crashed into one another in the Belvidere road a mile west of Volo Saturday night. Miss Agnes Sorenson of Grayslake was the victim. She was thrown out and instantly killed. Both legs were fractured, according to Dr. Struthers and the body crushed.

The accident happened Saturday night about 9:30 and was due to a vampire driver who cut between the cars, obstructing their view and causing them to collide with another in trying to avoid him. The driver responsible for the accident got away. Shelton and Reed escaped serious injury.

Library Tag Day Is Scheduled for Saturday

HAPPENINGS IN NEARBY TOWNS

After eight years of work George Gerber and Chas. Huggins of Honey Creek, Wis., have completed the construction of an airplane which proved serviceable in a flying test made last week. Gerber and Huggins, who are each 21 years of age have been working on airplane construction in their spare time ever since they started to high school eight years ago. The experiment was watched with interest by the community and when the pilot who tried out the machine pronounced it fit to fly the inquiry club contributed a neat sum of money to assist Huggins to attend the aviation school.

Leave a clean camp ground behind you, urges the Chicago Motor club. In an appeal to motorists to preserve the natural beauty of the great outdoors and to minimize the restrictions being placed on camping by owners of private property. Scattered refuse, polluted streams and broken laws are poor monuments for the motorists and sportsman to leave behind, the club points out.

According to the report of the Illinois Department of Health infant mortality declined substantially in Illinois last year although the general death rate went up noticeably. The number of fatalities among babies less than one year of age was 9,297 in 1926 against 9,821 in 1925. These figures gave an infant mortality rate of 69.3 in 1926 and 71.8 in 1925, a decrease of about 3 per cent. Births reported in the State fell from 137,150 in 1925 to 134,156 in 1926.

The statement made through the public press recently by Mrs. Mary Polmatier Funk, county court probation officer, that there were two infants, a girl and a boy, available for adoption brought more than two dozen offers of homes for the homeless waifs. Adoption papers were filed last week and Mrs. Funk stated that the children were placed in homes where they would be taken care of in a good manner.

One fatality, three seriously injured and 29 persons, routed from their homes in the night was the result when an apartment house at 212 N. County street, Waukegan, Illinois, burned on last Saturday morning at 3:33 a. m. The dead man was Orlando Burris, 73, who fell from the window ledge where he had crawled to escape the flames, before firemen could effect a rescue.

The body of Carl Lemme, 19, of Burlington, was returned to his home from Iowa City, Iowa, after he, with aid of a squad of internes, had cheated death for 12 hours. Lemme died 12 hours after his lungs refused to function. Internes of the Iowa City hospital, working in shifts, steadily pumped air into his devitalized body after a tumor of the brain had paralyzed the muscles of the diaphragm.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"TRUTH" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, July 24.

The Golden Text was from Psalms 86:11, "Teach me thy way, O Lord; I will walk in thy truth."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth. For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ" (John 1:1, 14, 17).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christ, Truth, was demonstrated through Jesus to prove the power of Spirit over the flesh,—to show that Truth is made manifest by its effects upon the human mind and body, healing sickness and destroying sin" (p. 316).

Methodist Church Notes

A fine Christian spirit was shown last Sunday by the young ladies of the Garfield Park Baptist church choir when they volunteered to sing at the morning worship. The church appreciates this service and hopes that other of our summer visitors will not hesitate to offer their service. A note to the pastor when you expect guests who will sing is all that is needed. We can arrange for them to help us beautify our worship.

BRISTOL Additional News

Rev. Johnson had an accident last week Monday, while returning from Milwaukee, where he and his family, accompanied by several members of his Bible school, had spent the day in Washington park zoo and in the public museum. The smash occurred on U. S. highway 41, formerly known as the Kilbourn road, near Itasca and Kenosha county line where concrete repair work was being done. As he was about to drive around a barricade, he was struck by a heavy truck. Their little daughter, Barbara, was thrown through the windshield and received several cuts and bruises on the head and back. She was rushed to the Kenosha hospital by the next car that came along. Since the accident, she has improved rapidly. Other occupants of the car received minor bruises and cuts. Mr. Johnson's car was badly wrecked.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Jackson and family from Stockport, Ohio, are visiting relatives here.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—From the comfortable financial situation to which he had been born, Peter Milman, American gentleman of the old school, and last of his family, in practically reduced to penury through the misfortune of a friend, Hazen Brewer, whom he had unwisely trusted.

CHAPTER II

At ten o'clock on the following morning, Peter Milman entered the offices of a firm of lawyers which had transacted the private business of Hazen Brewer. Henry Payne, the head of the firm, looked troubled when Milman's card was brought in. The interview would not be pleasant for either of them.

"I came," Milman began in his urbane manner, "to find out, if possible, the extent of Mr. Brewer's losses. I might have called on Hazen, but in a moment like this he has worried enough."

"I hope Mr. Brewer is not worrying now."

"Then things are not as bad as they seemed?" Milman's heart pounded as he said it.

"Worse. I've had news for you, Mr. Milman. Poor Hazen Brewer committed suicide in the early hours of this morning. I suppose when he saw there was left nothing but liabilities, his mind gave way."

Payne wished he could discover from Milman's expression how much or little this news meant to him. But Milman had too much control of himself to allow any man to see how stricken he was.

"Poor Hazen," he murmured. "He was one of my oldest and best friends."

A curious tribute, thought the lawyer, to one whose speculations had ruined him. But perhaps the other did not yet realize to what an extent his private fortune was involved.

"The mortgage on my house," Milman began, "I suppose it will be foreclosed?"

"I'm afraid so. There will be a meeting of his creditors within a day or so. If I can act for you in any way, I shall be only too glad to do so."

"You are very kind," said Peter Milman courteously. He shook Mr. Payne's hand and left.

"A thoroughbred," murmured the lawyer, who had seen many distinguished men listen to bad news in this office. "Poor devil, wiped out absolutely!"

Before going home, Peter Milman took his way to an agency which specialized in French domestic help of the better sort.

"I want," he said to the woman at the desk, "a French butler who will do the entire work of a house in which only a few of the rooms are occupied. A woman comes in by the day to clean the place and the windows, and the furnace is attended to."

"I think I can suit you," she said, and turned to a card index.

"Well," said the other. "There are other necessary qualifications. He must be a good plain cook and know no English."

"That makes it easier," she said. "I have a man with very good references who could fill the bill. He came over in the last quota. If you could wait a few minutes, I could arrange to have you meet him."

Achille Luty was forty-seven, rather terrified with the size and noise of New York, and anxious to begin to save money so that he might return to Antwerp and establish a restaurant. The wages he was offered seemed marvelous. The restrictions seemed no burden to him. He had no friends to ask into the house, and the little leisure he was allowed made the saving of his wages certain. He was to report at the house on Lower Fifth Avenue tomorrow at noon.

That night at dinner the establisment noted a certain unusual nervousness in his master's manner. The old butler did not dream of the ill fortune that awaited him.

"Snead," Peter Milman began, when the coffee had been poured out, "my future household arrangements will be on a different scale from what they have been of late. You have been a faithful servant to me for many years. I am not likely to find your equal. In lieu of notice I shall give you six months' wages. I shall be glad if you will leave before luncheon tomorrow."

"Oh, Mr. Peter, sir," Snead waited, "what have I done to be treated like this?"

"Nothing. If I had my way, I should never let you go. You cannot understand how sorry I am. But the thing is inevitable. There are matters which you must not ask me to explain. This is one of them."

"Let me stay," Snead begged. "I don't want wages. I can do the work we pay that woman for, and tending the furnace is good exercise. This is my home, too, sir."

"Snead," said the other kindly, "if I tell you that by remaining here you will embarrass me and imperil certain plans I have determined on, will you still want to stay?"

"I'd do anything for you, Mr. Peter," he said brokenly.

"I knew you would. I will say this: If, by any turn of the wheel, things become better, I will have you back."

"The papers say nothing is left," Snead returned demurely.

"If the papers were always correct, this would be a dreiful world."

Snead looked into the face of a Peter Milman he did not know, and he had believed he knew his employer in every mood. It seemed to the butler he had discovered a new personality, someone more ruthless, harder, bitterer.

"The man who comes tomorrow will never take your place. You may regard him as a temporary expedient. When you go, Snead, I shall see one of my few friends depart."

"You May Regard Him as a Temporary Expedient."

The butler knew that there was no argument he could use to change his employer's determination. But he was cheered by the faint hope that some day he might return. Mr. Peter, he reflected, had never been like other men. Reserved, non-communitive, aloof and austere, but inflexibly a man of his word. Six months was not so long. Snead thought he would spend the period in foreign travel. He had understood that during the past quarter century certain improvements had been made in the world.

When Peter Milman told Snead that his presence would imperil certain plans, he was speaking sober truth in the upper rooms of his home there had been born the determination to save the things he loved from being disposed of at auction. It seemed almost as though the shades of his forebears, lingering about the things that had been theirs, had concentrated their influence upon their ultimate descendant. He had gone to the Milman museum to say farewell. He had put down his ancestor's sword with the determination to fight. And in this fight Snead, for all his faithful ways and honest heart, could have no part. Any deviation from the way of life he had followed for so many years would alarm the faithful butler. He would inevitably have imagined his employer was ill and buzzed about him like an anxious fly.

Milman's way of life changed directly Achille Luty entered his service. To the Frenchman it was nothing unusual that Milman went out frequently. Luty knew nothing of the former secluded existence. A few days after Snead's begina had begun, Achille Luty dropped three letters into a nearby mail-box. The letters were addressed to: Fleming Bradney, Edgewater, N. J.; Floyd Malet of Philadelphia; Neeland Barnes of Peekskill-on-the-Hudson.

Fleming Bradney, returning home from a tedious day of work in the laboratory of an oil refinery, found his letter on the table where his meal was set. He was a big, untidy man of middle age, taciturn, and unpopular with his fellows because he invited no confidences nor answered personal questions. At the Edgewater refinery, as in that at Bayonne from which he had come two years previously, he was known as F. Bradney. None suspected him of being the great physicist, Fleming Bradney, once the foremost man in his line America had produced.

He slit the envelope and looked at the address and signature. The name

Peter Milman meant as little to him as his own name to Edgewater. Bradney had never read a Social Register in his life. Between the pages was a money order for one hundred dollars. "I beg you," Peter Milman wrote, "not to imagine that by inclosing this money I suppose you to be an object for charity. I urgently desire you to dine with me today week at half-past seven o'clock, and it may be that you must engage a substitute or be put—by my request—to some expense not otherwise necessary."

"You may ask yourself why you should go to this trouble for a man unknown to you. I would answer that I am thoroughly acquainted with your life history and entertain a great admiration for your genius. Think of me as one anxious to see you regain your rank as one of the great scientists of the world. Perhaps at this dinner you may be offered the opportunity."

"Beside yourself there will be, I trust, Neeland Barnes, formerly an international polo player and owner of race horses, and Floyd Malet, who, when he seemed about to take his place in the world as a great sculptor, suffered an unfortunate eclipse."

Bradney went to the library and opened the New York directory. Sure enough, Peter Milman was recorded as living on Lower Fifth Avenue. The thing, then, was not a foolish practical joke.

Puffing at a big pipe, Fleming Bradney sat on his little balcony and gazed at Manhattan lights. This strange letter had awakened old hopes and ambitions that he had thought for ever dead. Of course, there could be no practical joke which expended a hundred dollars on its fulfillment. Bradney read the letter again. The phrase, "Perhaps at this dinner you may be offered the opportunity," took his fancy strangely. Opportunity! Did any exist for a man who had been disgraced and was now forgotten? Until this letter came Bradney had believed his career finished. He went into his bedroom and disinterred a suit of full evening dress from its mothball tomb. He had not worn it for a dozen years.

Peter Milman's letter reached Neeland Barnes at a moment when that eminent sportsman was engaged in staying off his most persistent creditor, the landlord Lippsky.

Barnes was a tall, finely made man who had run through several fortunes by his love for horses and his inability to judge of their chances in races. After his wife had died, his relatives had shrugged their shoulders and abandoned him. The many schemes for his rehabilitation had failed. He disappeared from fashionable resorts. His only daughter was being brought up in England by rich relations. He had drifted about the world until, at the end of all resources, he had taken a little house on the outskirts of Peekskill.

Here he was engaged in what he explained as an attempt "to stage a comeback." He was trying to become physically fit, and he was succeeding. But mountain hikes and sculling up the noble stream brought no grist to the mill.

"Mr. Barnes, you are a loafer," Lippsky cried when the sportsman had announced his inability to pay rent long overdue. This seemed cruelly unjust to a man who had just returned from a twenty-mile walk.

"Some day, if you keep on annoying me," said Neeland Barnes, "I shall kill you."

"You don't have to kill me," Lippsky cried shrilly. "You just pay my rent. Sell your swell clothes and get overalls." He waved Peter Milman's letter. "Get some of your swell friends to lend you money."

Neeland Barnes looked at the letter, puzzled. He did not recognize the writing, but the stationery was reassuring.

"When what you term my swell friends know I am living in a hotel like this, they will advance me the money. I shall not ask them until I have finished my training. I am about to begin. If I hit you, it's your look-out."

Barnes began his shadow-boxing exercises. Dimly Lippsky perceived that his debtor was getting nearer and nearer. He went out muttering "Loafer." It was a word which did much to appease him.

Barnes boxed no more when his landlord had disappeared. He read the astonishing letter a dozen times and secreted the money-order at once. Alone of the three who had received somewhat stellar communications, he knew of Milman and his family. Very distantly they were connected by marriage. Barnes had no idea that the Brewer failure had brought Peter Milman to penury. One sentence he found strangely intriguing: "If, as I believe, you feel yourself unfairly treated by the world that was yours, I may be able to offer you the opportunity to take your place again in society."

Neeland Barnes longed above all things for the comfortable life that had once been his. He had never permitted himself to become shabby. Never had he sunk to such a state that former friends would hesitate to recognize him. He clung to the idea that when once he ceased to shiver and wear clean linen the descent to hell would have begun.

He rolled a cigarette and indulged in pleasing reveries. Good dinners were not given him nor were hundred-dollar bills expended for nothing. Peter Milman wanted him to do something. Well, Neeland Barnes was his man. Perhaps after all these years the man who had run away with Mrs. Milman was back in America. Perhaps Peter Milman desired him to be chastised publicly. He would find Neeland Barnes devoid of fear and in better physical trim than he had been for a dozen years. Barnes always saw himself in a heroic light. He hoped the thing would be staged so that his old cronies might see it. They would never believe that he could keep so fit after the scandalous rumors that had been spread about him.

Naturally there would be expense money. It would be a delightful experience to pay Lippsky his deferred rent in nickels and cents and watch him scrambling feverishly for the coins among poison ivy. And he would be able to send his daughter a decent present at last. Poor Nita, whom he had not seen for years, brought up by jealous relatives far from his care. The adventure might lead to amazing things.

Presently these brilliant prospects faded. He was conscious that his only home was in Lippsky's grotesquely furnished house. Adventures with glorious endings offered themselves only to youth. He sighed a little. Then he smiled. After all, he had the hundred dollars and the prospect of a good dinner.

Floyd Malet, under the name of M. Floyd, was earning a poor living by teaching drawing in Philadelphia private schools. The man who had hoped to see his name associated with Rodin and Meunier was forgotten by all save the few who had seen in him the signs of genius. Malet was a man of middle size, thin and haggard. Once or twice fastidious pupils had complained that he paid too little attention to his personal appearance. Milman's letter came by late mail. At first the sculptor was inclined to think it an advertising scheme of some sort. The Lower Fifth Avenue address was thick with loft and office buildings. Like Bradney, he went to a library and looked up Milman. The genealogical department gave him ample data.

The stranger's letter held out the promise of temporary relief from an intolerable life. There was money for the trip and enough over to live for many weeks as he had lately learned to live. He packed his grip, thankful he had saved a suit of evening clothes.

There is something stifling about the air of Manhattan. It had its effect on the three men bound for Peter Milman's house. Bradney held up his head again and Malet lost his droop of depression. Neeland Barnes, walking lopsidly down the avenue, passed clubs which had dropped him on account of nonpayment of dues and felt himself within measurable distance of re-election. His military mustache and fine carriage made him a marked figure, and he liked the limelight.

As he neared the Milman house he wondered what his fellow guests would be like. In other years no physicists had been numbered among his acquaintances. He was not quite certain what a physicist was. As to sculptors, he had met one in Rome, but he was a marquis. Sculptors were probably all right. He was reassured by remembering that the wife of a former polo player had her own studio. But he would probably have to domineer the conversation with Peter Milman and talk of old New York society. He must be careful not to mention the Daynes. The runaway wife had been a Dayne.

Wedged in between tall buildings the Milman house looked squat and unimpressive. Yet Barnes gazed at it with respect. To be able to retain it spelled wealth. Lesser men would have sold at a profit and moved up town. What this millionaire might want with Neeland Barnes was a delightful mystery. He rapped loudly with the brass knocker.

A few minutes earlier Floyd Malet had stood appalled at the dingy ugliness of the building. He did not think with any sympathy of that generation represented by the builder, which had distrusted elegance and loved what was solid and lasting. To the sculptor it seemed the Milman home was modeled on the old Astor house. But he liked the door and the brass knocker, which was a copy of that decorating an Oxford college.

The last to come was Fleming Bradney, whom the subway had delayed. He rather liked the house. It had strength and the air of studied isolation. None could look through its windows to disturb the inmates. It lay fifteen feet back from the sidewalk. Bradney had that imagination without which mathematicians can never be great. When and what was he to see behind the tall door?

LOCALS TAKE EASY GAME FROM AVON

W. Steininger With Six Hits Leads Team in Slug Fest to 23 to 0 Victory

Antioch won a farcical game from Avon last Sunday by walloping the ball all over the lot. Antioch fell before this team earlier in the season for an unexpected defeat and so the victory was real revenge for the local stars.

Bill Steininger led the hitting for the winners with six straight, 1 triple, 2 doubles and 3 singles. He hit them all on the nose and deserved what he got. Morley, Morrow and Hardin rang up 4 hits each. The boys got 27 hits good for 43 bases, which is believed to be a new league record.

Morley pitched another strong game and held his opponents to 8 hits, well scattered. He struck out 6 and walked one. Unlike most of his other games where he eased up after his team got a large lead, he kept bearing down and gave Antioch its third shut out victory of the season.

Antioch pulled a nice play in the first inning, cutting off a run and helping Morley with his calculating. Job, Wolff singled and stole second, then J. Wallace banged a fly to right center which looked good for a double but Lasco, the locals dependable little center fielder, was after it and threw to Bill Steininger whose relay to Halwas caught Wolff sliding into home and retired the side.

The fielding of Simpson, local handy man, at third base was very good. He handled 8 chances, some of them pretty hot ones too, without an error. Captain Philip is one of the most versatile players in the league having played catcher, outfielder and at every infield position and shown himself to be good any place. Much of the good showing made by the locals is due to his great all-around play. He always bats well over 300 and is an aggressive type of ball player.

The Antioch team is hitting the ball hard and with 8 players having 300 or better averages will be a tough team to beat. Hard hitting coupled with great pitching and good fielding has accounted for most of Antioch's wins this year.

Next Sunday Antioch will play the Waukegan Cardinals. They now have a much stronger team than the one Antioch defeated earlier in the season. They have been playing great ball recently and should put up some strong opposition for the local sluggers. W. Steininger and Simpson will probably be the Antioch battery and Woodward or Dunham will pitch with Gillette catching for the victors.

Antioch is firmly entrenched in third place and expects to hold it until the end of the season. If one of the first teams hits a slump Antioch may be able to finish better than third. There are five games some women, with the aid of the fire department succeeded in subduing it before it got under full sway. It was agreed by all that the fact that there was no wind at that time was the only thing that saved the southwest corner of town.

left and the home players are going to try for a clean sweep.
